

LODGE &
CONFERENCE CENTRE

Welcome to Emerald Lake Lodge

We have put together a small collection of wines from around the world for you to enjoy. We have used the following criteria to make our decisions.

First ...they have to be delicious.

Second ...they have to be pure.

Third ... they have to be individual.

Fourth ... they have to have value.

In hopes of adding a little insight into the wine program we have filled the left hand side of the wine list with little bits of information.

Some information is guided toward explaining an area, grape varietal or producer while other information is there as a tasting note and general historical information.

If you have all the information you need and are just looking for a glass of something delicious you can forgo the left hand side and stare directly into the right hand column.

Cheers!
Brad Royale
Wine Director

BY THE GLASS

As you can see by the beauty that surrounds you, British Columbia has many things to offer. In the southern reaches of the province beyond the mountain tops, glacial streams and dense forest, lies a hot patch of agricultural land influenced by the Sonoran desert and surrounding lakes. The hot days and cool evenings of the Sonoran climate allow for a bevy of grape varieties to flourish, yielding grapes with superb ripeness and bright acidity. In the south around Osoyoos and Oliver the intense heat provides Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon, Malbec, Petit Verdot, Syrah and many others with ample ripeness delivering wines with savory fruit cores and age worthy structures. More northerly in the areas of Naramata, Penticton, and Kelowna the climate eases allowing for Riesling, Pinot Blanc, Pinot Gris, Chardonnay and Pinot Noir to blossom with vibrant purity and delicate nuances paying tribute to the orchards that once covered the area.

With such a rich diversity of grapes budding from a youthful industry, it is only the imagination of the winemaker that sets our limits on what the valley can produce.

Our “by the glass” program at Emerald Lake Lodge focuses exclusively on the wines from the Okanagan Valley, Similkameen Valley and surrounding areas. We take great pride in sourcing the best the province has to offer.

SPARKLING (150ml)

2017 BELLA Rose of Gamay and Chardonnay 13gl 65bt

...Wonderfully refreshing with supple and layered acidity. Perfect for every minute of the day.

WHITE (150ml)

2016 HOWLING BLUFF Sauvignon Blanc 12gl 60bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
...Excellent purity with gripping freshness. Warm gooseberry and juicy cantaloupe.

2017 SPEARHEAD Pinot Gris 13gl 65bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
...The most pristine Anju pear with a light dusting of black pepper.

2017 UPPER BENCH Chardonnay 14gl 70bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
...Succulent with ripe Gala apples, delicate wool and sunflower seeds. Absolutely lovely.

RED (150ml)

2016 MEYER FAMILY Pinot Noir 14gl 70bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
... A hint on the herbal side with a gentle flowing current of raspberry...

2016 STAG’S HOLLOW Dolcetto 13gl 65bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
...A fine version of this Italian native with faint hazelnut and cold blueberry juice.

2015 VAN WESTEN Merlot ~ Cabernet Franc Voluptuous 15gl 75bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada)
...Very lush and very sexy. A huge drape of wild blackberry and faint black licorice.

SWEET (60ml)

2015 HESTER CREEK Pinot Blanc Late Harvest 14gl 45bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada) 200ml
...A delicately sweet palate with fresh peach, cantaloupe and white flowers.

LA FRENZ Tawny 12gl 72bt
(Okanagan Valley, Canada) 375ml
...A luscious full bodied dessert wine with burnt orange peel, walnut and caramel.

The Okanagan lends itself well to high quality sparkling grapes. The growing season usually provides grapes with ample acidity and delicate fruits flavors, crucial for top sparkling wine production. See You Later Ranch has become a staple with their fruit focused sparkler shining the high tones of orchard fruit.

The Belluard from Savoie is one of the sharpest, mineral driven wines you'll possibly ever try...it's a must...so you know. Cristalino provides ample pre-dinner bubbles.

Champagne: the crown of the sparkling wine world. Dedication to style and development of specific attributes has rendered each Champagne house unique. Using the classic varietals of Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Muenier each producer utilizes a different approach to how they create their Champagne, thus yielding exciting house styles. Champagne is best served from magnum. Bryan Childs famously once said, "you need a magnum because you want a big glass of it, you never want it to end." and thus we have on offer here for you, the crazy good Maillart.

The joy of formats! Indecision is something everyone suffers from. Should I have white?

Should have I have red? What are you having for dinner? I have no idea.

Ways to maneuver this stalemate of options is of course to compromise, and to look for more than one answer to our course-after-course of choices. This can be handled nicely with a selection of half bottles over the course of dinner. Perhaps a little white to start (or bubbles p. 4) and then some red with our chicken and bison.

Kim Crawford delivers the kiwi punch of apricot and sweet lemon oil. The Louis Michel Chablis from the famed Butteaux vineyard is very much on point at the moment.

Rocche Castamagna's Barolo Rocche dell'Annunziata from the 2011 vintage is killer...this small vineyard is an amphitheater of heat, giving rise to extracted wines from the hill of La Morra. Cristia's 2013 Chateauneuf du Pape is ripe and generous with an explosive cherry highlight. Stuhlmuller is structured and generous delivering all the Cabernet goodness you're looking for.

Sometimes one is certainly not nearly enough to get us where we're going. In situations where we have four or more guests one bottle will only get around the table so many times before we're looking at an empty bottle and full plates of elk. In these times it is common to appreciate the large formats of magnums and double magnums.

Jean Foillard's Morgon Côte du Py is legendary among fine wine lovers...there is a magnum in front of you...it's what I would order. Arcanum's 2010 Il Fauno is a powerhouse wine, full of punch. Vietti's 2003 Barolo is selected from a stable of Grand Cru vineyards most would die to have; relinquishing a formidable portfolio of horse stable, field berry, road tar and breakfast tea.

The double magnum is a celebration of sorts all on its own. There is nothing to do but to have an amazing time when you open four bottles of wine at once. A party is instantly born. Laughing Stock always delivers a solid mouthful of wine...especially when there are 3 liters of it!!

WINE YOU MAY NOT KNOWBUT YOU SHOULD...

No warm evening should go without the wonderfully dry, crisp and stony character of Muscadet. Clos de Briords is a legend.

The Bea family has been farming the hills of Umbria around the town of Montefalco since the 1500s. The family are as much farmers as they are winemakers, growing much of the food they eat and raising the animals they need. This is real wine from real farmers.

This white wine has been fermented with the skins, just like a red wine, so it has picked up color making it orange. This results in a wine of immense pleasure with a depth of character unlike most whites.

Muscat is aromatic with orange blossom and chamomile. This particular wine has been fermented like a red wine, yielding a wine of amber color and fantastic richness. This is dynamite with dinner. Dry and powerful.

From one of the highest vineyards planted in the valley this unique offering from legendary Donald Triggs. This is one of the finest and most exciting whites coming from British Columbia.

Beautiful, dry and crisp. Sauvignon Blanc is most perfect for quenching thirst, while at times also delivering a targeted delivery of nuanced herbal and mineral notes. The 2014 Gitton is dynamite offering a wonderful array of gooseberry and cold stone.

So often Riesling gets the “sweet” rap. Most of the selections here finely balance the richness with amazing acidity, making for some of the most balanced and refreshing wines in the world. A little age has tamed the Richter Spätlese here into a glass of hay, juniper, white flowers and plums. The 2015 Leitz Roseneck Spätlese is one of my favorite wines of the vintage. It is an explosive wine with huge aromatics and a palate that gushes, I was thoroughly elated when this arrived.

Rosé is the perfect in-between; as the color suggests it offers the red fruits of red wine, while its crisp acid and refreshing quality steer towards white wine. Perfect.

The Traminer grape originates in the Alto Adige region of northern Italy. Having been transplanted into Austria, then to the Pfalz in Germany, it finally made its way into the Alsace and Jura regions of France. Along the way it mutated, giving birth to the musqué version of Traminer, or as we now know Gewurztraminer.

Roussanne, Viognier and Clairette along with Marsanne are staples of the Rhône Valley in France and are making more headway into the Okanagan Valley every year! These highly aromatic whites offer dry palates with ample concentration. Good stuff.

Pinot Gris shines in the Okanagan Valley and ranks the most planted white grapes in the whole province. The valley's intense days and sandy loam soils allow these grapes to shine. Laughing Stock is nuanced with black pepper and ripe Anjou pear while the Spearhead is more reserved offering more early season orchard fruit.

The world's most loved white grape: Chardonnay. A grape that is loved for its ability to play multiple rolls in a variety of characters. It is equally appreciated for its leanness and transparency of mineral when planted in cooler areas on mixtures of limestone (Burgundy) and clay as it is for the robust power and agility it shows when grown in warmer temperatures and brushed with barrel aging (Santa Maria Valley). Jean Paul Brun offers a softly textured version of Chardonnay with sunflower and Gala apple. Cordier's Pouilly-Fuissé is a powerful version of this much loved wine. The Foxen is the perfect mix of cream and citrus.

WINE YOU MAY NOT KNOW... ...BUT YOU SHOULD...

So popular was the fruit from White Rose that they themselves didn't even have a label until recently.

Producers like St Innocent, Panther Creek and Torii Mor have all produced single vineyard wines from his hallowed vineyard.

This Syrah from the Northern Rhône valley stems from some of the countries most famous vineyards. Names like Landonne, Roziers and Chavaroche are like Park Place addresses in this part of the world. This is extremely pleasurable.

There is very little Zweigelt left planted in British Columbia. Most of it has been replanted with trendier varieties. This is now a rare gem.

This style of blend using these three grapes will become more fashionable from Argentina as more Syrah vineyards grow to maturity. Eventually we'll see more stand alone Syrah...which is great!

The 2013 vintage in Italy yielded wines full of power and structure. For those who like wines of richer intensity this vintage is for you.

Pinot Noir has always been a noble varietal, coming to its apex in Burgundy. However, in the last twenty years the grape has exploded reaching the farthest viticultural zones on earth. At the far southern tip of Argentina, in the rugged lands of Patagonia you will now find serious Pinot Noir being grown...about as far away from Burgundy as it gets.

Attention is drawn to Pinot Noir for the demure, even shy, nuances that often tend to beguile rather than blow-away the drinker.

Pinot Noir is known for soaring perfume reminiscent of freshly dug stone, perfectly ripe cherries, raspberries harvested in the warmth of summer sun, essence of forest air, the smell of rain, tree bark...it's a long list.

The Okanagan Valley provides ample warmth and suitable sites to grow Pinot Noir that emphasize delicate herbal nuances and sweet cherry fruit. This effect coupled with the warmth of California makes for some sublime Pinot Noir.

Who could argue that the sweet wafts of strawberry, red string licorice, hay, rose petal and delicate river washed stone that emanate from the finest Gamay is not for them? I know of no such person. 2016 was a spectacular vintage for Blue Mountain, perfectly light and wonderfully fresh. The 2015 vintage in Europe yielded wines with intense fruit personalities, which makes it a perfect vintage for lavish Beaujolais. Check out the Foillard Côte du Py...it's a big one.

The lure of Syrah lies within its ability to provide a myriad of flavors and intensities. Cold campfire smoke, smoked meat and violet are prevalent when grown in the northern Rhône Valley. The Southern Okanagan Valley has proven an ample garden for this aromatic varietal. Lush black currant, graphite, charred oak and bacon are evident when produced by the likes of Colgin in Napa Valley. Sine Qua Non is arguably the hardest wine to secure in the world...we're very lucky to have just a few bottles of this mind -blowing juice.

Malbec was once a heavyweight in Bordeaux, but now much more the star grape of the Mendoza region of Argentina. The El Enimago is a decidedly rich little monster. The Mas del Perie is fragrant and fresh and touches down into the rustic iron oxide side of aromatics, while The Clos Siguier is about as wild as the day is long, both very much worth exploring.

Cabernet Franc is a gem of wine, especially from the Loire Valley, if you love piercing aromatics and quenching acidity. Both Breton and Baudry are absolute stars.

Merlot found its first spotlight of fame providing much of the base for wines north of the Dordogne tributary in Saint-Emilion and Pomerol. Here with a base of clay and limestone soils and with the Atlantic providing moderating weather Merlot is able to deliver ethereal mineral nuances with perfectly ripe plum, red currant and damp forest tree bark.

Certan de May is a classic example of Bordeaux, and one of 2010's top wines. The rest of the world, looking for a piece of the glory and the high prices, planted the grape as well and thus started a wave of plantings. Washington State wineries, using the Cascade mountain range as a rain shield, have planted on either side of the Columbia River to enormous success with the varietal. Merlot is the most dominant red varietal planted in the Okanagan Valley. Merlot from the south around Osoyoos and Oliver gain concentration from the added heat.

Just as Merlot is planted the world over, it is followed with equal enthusiasm by Cabernet Sauvignon. Cabernet Sauvignon is the mighty pillar for the wines south of the Garonne tributary in Bordeaux, making up the majority of such famous wines as Château Latour and Haut-Bergey. It performs with such agility and power in these gravel mounds that the wines from good vintages can last upwards of a hundred years. This is by no means an easy feat and as such has garnished envious tongues from around the world. Napa Valley is the North American king of Cabernet Sauvignon. Nowhere else on the continent does the grape fetch such high praise or a higher dollar. The Vineyard 29 estate in Napa showcases the rich black currant, bread dough and graphite characters that emerge from the best of Napa Valley. Much of the best Okanagan Cabernet Sauvignon is grown in the south to take advantage of the heat and small plots of gravel. Moving north of Penticton, the Naramata bench is aided by the moderating effect of Okanagan Lake allowing for some very pretty styles of Cabernet Sauvignon to showcase cool cedar, thyme, tender leaves and ripe blackberry.

Spain is a wild wilderness of wine. Its first vines were planted between 4000bc and 3000bc. Throughout the ages it has gained and lost more wine regions due to disease, population movement, religious orders and simple fads than most new wine producing countries put together. It is in a renaissance of sorts at the moment. The older generation is moving aside, allowing a new generation of talented, driven wine makers who are keen to crush the vast supply of old vine grapes that abound on the peninsula.

What is old is certainly new again in Spain...thankfully. Tempranillo has long been a staple of central Spain, turning out black saturated wines in Ribera del Duero and producing elegant, complex barrel-aged examples in Rioja. Spanish wines ability to age is noteworthy. The wines take on beautiful savory notes, classic leather profiles and intense black earth scents. The wines listed here are killer. The 1999 Remelluri Gran Reserva is one of the greatest recent releases from Rioja. Conde Valdemar just released their 2001 Grand Reserva from their cellars and it is absolutely sublime drinking right now and superb value.

Italy has long produced an amazing amount of wine styles from a staggering amount of different grape varieties...making the country a ton of fun to explore. Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon have been added to the roster making for delicious blending partners with the local varietals. The high tone and freshness of Sangiovese is often bolstered and concentrated with additions of these two Bordeaux grapes.

Occhipinti comes from Sicily and is an absolute delight to drink if you love fresh perky little reds. Arcanum offers ferocious value. Quintarelli is probably the most acclaimed Amarone house and their pretty Primofiore give you a taste of how amazing their wines are. Those looking for something pretty should look here.

The richness and intensity of Amarone is known to most wine lovers. The concentration of the grapes through drying results in a wine with a sturdy body and loads of mincemeat, dried flowers, hung game, chocolate biscuits, espresso and sour cherry. Allegrini utilizes some new oak barrique adding a hint of vanilla.

Piedmont has long been a source for high quality wines. The land itself is a real life wall to wall carpet of flavor with vineyards literally covering almost every hillside and valley. Nebbiolo is the grape that takes Piedmont terroir to its height. The south facing slopes around Barolo and Barbaresco are covered with this late ripening grape. Its wines are usually light in hue, with soaring aromatics of rose petal, tar, dense woods, savory cherry, old leather and iron. A firm palate of tannins and refreshing acids make them quite perfect for the dinner table, especially with game meats. Angelo Gaja makes a dense Barbaresco with a perfume of menthol and grilled meat.

Brunello di Montalcino has its origins dating back only to 1888 with its inception taking place under the hands of Ferruccio Biondi-Santi. The hilltop town of Montalcino lies 112km south of Florence giving it a warmer climate than that of Chianti making its Sangiovese riper and more concentrated. 2008 was a fresh year in Tuscany making Pieri Agostina fresh and precocious with almost jammy red fruits and soft structure. The Casanova di Neri is quite aristocratic and showing immense power.

It's amazing what will brew from a war. The rivalry between the French and English have led to amazing discoveries, Port being one of them. During the 17th century England and France were either at war, or thinking of war. A high tax on French wine implemented by William III in 1693 led English merchants to the Portuguese market. The heady wines of the Duoro made their way into the merchant ships, who would then add a dollop of brandy to make sure the wines made the voyage without losing their vigor. The English eventually found an Abbot in the town of Lamengo who was adding the brandy during fermentation. Port was born. Over the years various styles of Port have emerged. Below is a little description of each.

Tawny: Port that is aged in wood its entire life until it is deemed ready for sale, upon which it is bottled and sold for immediate consumption. Usually 10yr, 20yr, 30yr, 40yr.

Colheita: A tawny Port that is sourced from a single vintage. Aged a minimum of seven years.

Vintage: The cream of Port. Declared only in exceptional vintages and aged only 2 years in barrel and then bottled. Dense and brooding.

Madeira is an island off the west coast of Portugal. Historically known to sailors as a port of refuge and staple ballast weight in the form of wine barrels. The ship's journeys would add a certain "heated" note to the wine. Nowadays the heat is specially recreated, but the flavor is still as grand as it once was. A true memory of wine.
